

Personal finance stories from families who are beating debt & building wealth.

A New Year's Resolution

Candles have become mere wax,
And the decorations have been put in sacks;
The presents have now all been dispersed,
And now it's finally January 1st.

The ball drops magically in Times Square,
And we raise our voices into the air;
We shout with cheers for all to hear,
It's a time for hope to appear.

Yet even tho' there's magic in the air,
We all make goals without much care;
Even still, we try to keep them all year long,
The result? Oh well... and we skip along.

And all these goals I make today,
Are truly just wishes thrown away;
I won't work on them the way I should,
Because in the end, I didn't even think I could.

Written by: Jacob Merkley (Power Over Life)

Published on: Family On A budget (Jan 2017)